Subject: RIN 1210-AB32

Dear Sir,

I recently learned of RIN1210-32 and how this would remove my ability to trade options using my IRA account. I'm in the baby boomers generation rapidly approaching retirement years and trying to increase my retirement portfolio through the stock market. Ultimately, trading options through specialized training and knowledge actually reduces the amount of money at risk in the in the stock market. By implementing this law, would restrict my capability to increase my IRA portfolio.

By not allowing this rule to pass and allowing other baby boomers such as myself the freedom to trade options using our IRA would not only benefit others such as myself but the entire government as well. For example, trading options increases my IRA account allows me to have more funds to support me and family and less dependent on the the federal government for support through social security and other federal subsidies. Also, increasing my IRA also increases my federal tax obligation when I reach age 72 and begin withdrawing from my account which obviously is good for the government.

In conclusion, I see it as a win-win situation if we don't allow RIN 1210-AB32 become law.

Please give the above a serious thought and how we could have a win-win situation.

Sincerely,

Keith I Tamura
